For TRU Community Care and its supporters, 2016 has brought many reasons to celebrate. We’re turning 40 this year, meaning we’ve been caring for those who are dying and their families for four decades. TRU Community Care began as Boulder County Hospice in 1976, when one of the organization’s founders was asked, “Have you ever thought about starting a hospice?”

Pioneers in the Field
The question was posed to Beau Bohart Rezendes, who was finishing her Ph.D. dissertation on death and dying when she asked Dr. Darvin Smith what he thought could be done to help people who were dying or aged. His thought-provoking response was the beacon that pointed the way for Bohart Rezendes. Before long, she was talking to anyone who would listen about starting a hospice in Boulder County. Among those she approached were Kathryn Riddle-Oakes (then called Kitty Riddle), a well-known community organizer with vast experience in volunteer activities; Dr. Alan Snyder, an internist/oncologist at the Boulder Medical Center; and Karin Sobeck, who had just completed her master’s degree in mental health nursing and was holding workshops on death and dying across the country. Along with Marcia Lattanzi-Licht, a respected psychiatric nurse who was involved in grief counseling, they were instrumental in founding TRU Community Care.

NEW BUILDING NEARS COMPLETION

This artist’s rendering shows our new senior services and grief services building. The new campus, located near TRU’s administrative offices in Lafayette, is expected to be complete in May.

Over the past nine months, the lot just a couple blocks from TRU’s administrative offices has been abuzz with activity as construction crews build a new TRU facility. The new building will house TRU’s new senior care program, PACE (Program of All-Inclusive Care for the Elderly), and our Grief Services, which are currently based in Boulder.

The 22,000 square-foot campus includes a lobby, a clinic for primary and specialty medical care, physical therapy and rehab, a kitchen, activity rooms, enclosed patios, meeting space and counseling facilities. Constructed to maximize natural light and heat, the building has a number of energy-efficient features. Crews have been busy at work on the interiors this spring, and the project is slated to be finished and ready for use by Grief Services in early May. TRU PACE will start later this summer after it completes its State and Federal approval processes. More information will be available about this program soon.

The new building is located at 2593 Park Lane in Lafayette, and the community is invited to see the facility and join in its ribbon cutting on June 26 from 2 to 5 p.m. as part of TRU’s 40th Anniversary celebration.

“Our new building symbolizes TRU Community Care’s commitment to the community,” said Bob Thorn, TRU vice president of business development and TRU Pace. “In it, TRU Grief Services will have more dedicated space, in a warm and inviting environment, to serve its clients. And, TRU PACE will offer an equally welcoming atmosphere in which to provide all the services necessary to help seniors remain living safely and independently. This new building is built upon the same principles that have guided the organization for the past 40 years, and represents our vision to continue to meet the needs of our community for many years to come.”

SAVE THE DATE FOR PIZZAZ! 2016

We’re busy planning this year’s PIZZAZ!, which is set for Sept. 17. We’ll be groovin’ to a ‘70s theme, paying homage to our founding year of 1976. Mark your calendars for a night of Peace, Love and PIZZAZ! Also, we are in need of volunteers to help us plan this event, so if you are interested in being part of PIZZAZ!, contact Abigail Smith at Abigail.smith@trucare.org or 303-604-5389.
related work, this team of professionals added their talents and energy to the quest to bring hospice care to Boulder County. “I think all of us came with the vision that there were better ways to care for people who were dying and grieving and that there were clear gaps in services,” said Lattanzi-Licht.

Taking the Next Steps
Filling those gaps would prove to be a challenging mission. In the beginning, the group met in living rooms. They stored donations in a cigar box. They paid their own way to hospice care conferences on pain management. Despite such humble beginnings, they never wavered in their steadfast commitment to the cause, and by early 1977, Boulder County Hospice incorporated as a nonprofit, tax-exempt organization. Not surprisingly, its all-volunteer management team included the dedicated professionals who have come to be known as the nonprofit’s founders as well.

TRU today
The organization’s first patient received hospice care in June of 1977. Thanks to one provocative question and five remarkable visionaries, the organization has grown to become TRU Community Care, offering hospice, palliative care, grief services, and soon TRU PACE (Program of All-inclusive Care for the Elderly.) PACE represents an opportunity to create a broader continuum of care for frail elders in Boulder and southwest Weld Counties. The opening of the PACE site, which also will house TRU Hospice Grief Support, will be a chance to celebrate with the local community the years of service TRU has provided.

We’re challenging our supporters to contribute a minimum of $40 (Do you see a theme here?) between now and June 30. After a career as a maternity and children’s health nurse, Sue Samuels knew she wanted to give back in a health care setting. She discovered TRU Community Care in 2010 while volunteering at a nursing facility with her registered therapy dog Ginger, a six-year-old golden doodle. Now, she volunteers four to five hours each week doing Comfort Touch, pet visitation and 11th Hour companionship.

She says that one of the best parts about working with TRU is the support and education the organization extends to its volunteers. Through TRU training, she learned how to administer Comfort Touch, an acupressure therapy applied to the hands and feet that is safe for frail seniors with fragile skin.

Most staff and patients probably recognize Sue as Ginger’s sidekick. Ginger’s effect on patients can be remarkable, and she spreads her love to families and hospice staff, too.

“I’ve seen people who are mostly unresponsive open their eyes for the first time in two days when you put their hand on a dog’s head. There’s just a sense of comfort and peace that a dog brings,” she said.

However, Sue says her favorite form of volunteering is through 11th Hour companionship. She sits with patients who would otherwise be alone, playing relaxing music, doing Comfort Touch or simply holding the person’s hand.

“It’s being able to be present at a time when a person shouldn’t be alone,” she said, adding that volunteering with hospice in general is a very fulfilling experience. “I’m giving of myself in a way that makes sense to my beliefs and I’m getting as much as I give. I get a great deal of joy from helping a patient relax. I’m part of making a hard process better and easier.”
